THE SENIOR CLASS
of the
GLASSBORO STATE NORMAL SCHOOL
JUNE MCMXXVII

The Senior Class takes pride in presenting at the close of its course, a book of modest pretensions, circumscribed in content.

To the purchase of Camp Savitz they have this year given their best effort, and to Dr. Savitz the School has dedicated its shining lake and wooded shores.

To him is also dedicated this record, a part of the successful enterprise of which he has been the inspiration.

DEAR SENIORS:

The Principal and Faculty approach graduation with mingled feelings of regret and joy: of regret because of the breaking of ties, of joy because you are ready to assume the duties and responsibilities of teaching.

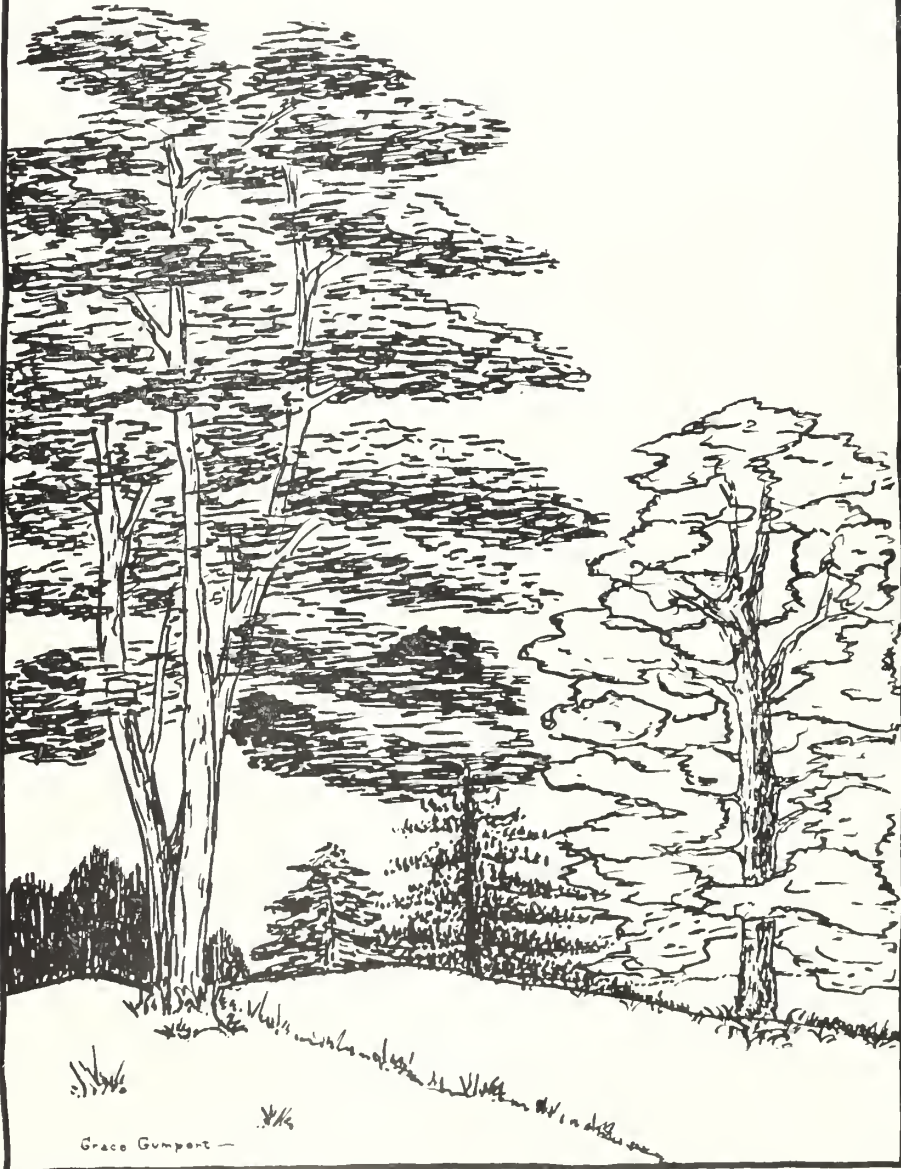

Their association with you, their work with you and for you, the opportunity to observe your growth and development, your response to their ministry, your fine spirit, and your happy, hopeful, buoyant lives have formed a bond between you and them which they are reluctant to sever; in fact, cannot sever. Though we go our separate ways after graduation, neither space nor time can affect the spiritual union which is the outgrowth of this association.

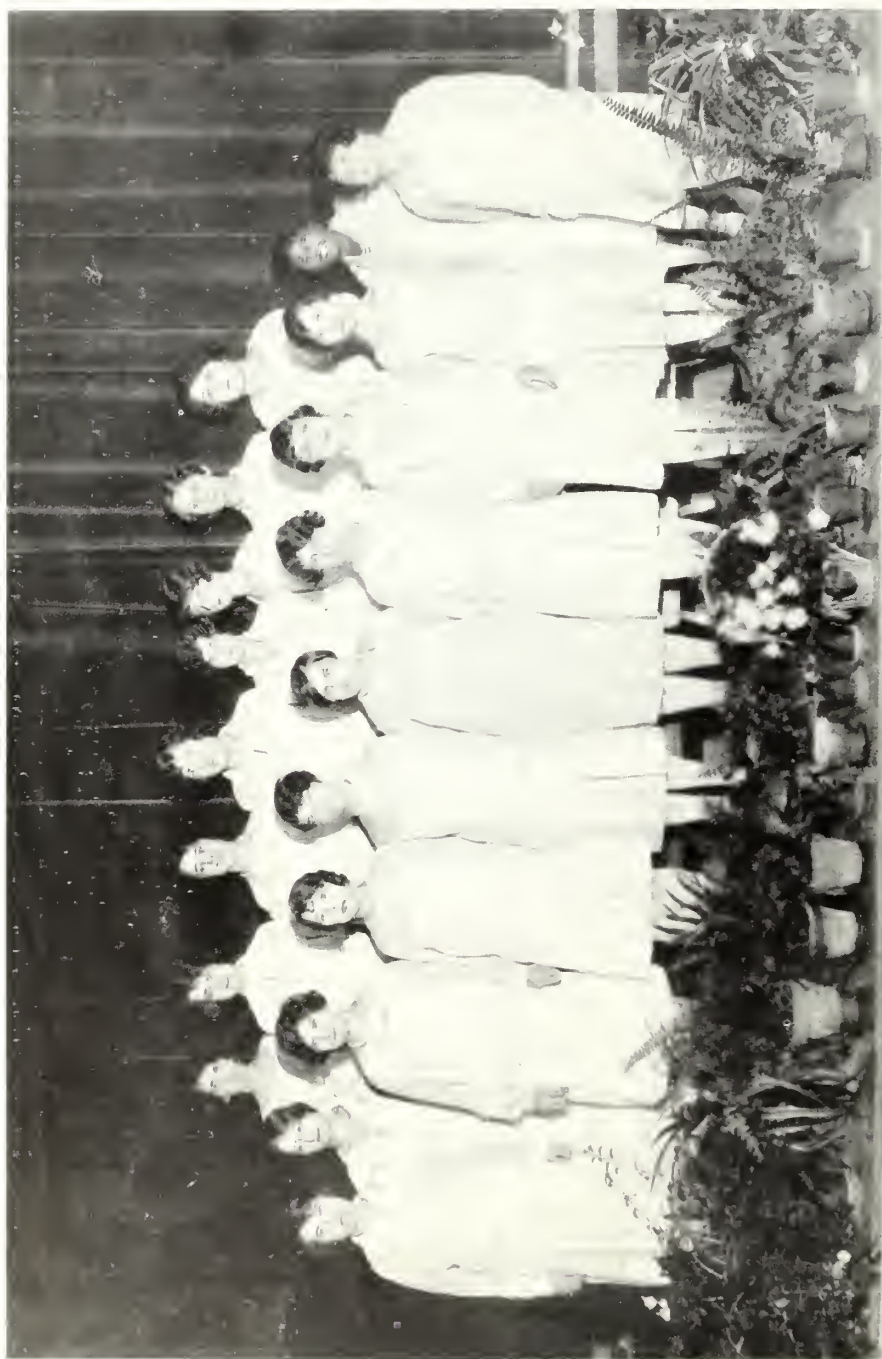

We rejoice that the time is drawing nigh when you are to go forth commissioned by the State of New Jersey to a ministry of service. The limitless possibilities of this service to the individual, to society, and to the State, through your interest and zeal for humanity and your fidelity and loyalty to your profession, have stirred in us a great hope for a manhood and womanhood spiritually ennobled and enriched.

Our common task, as faculty and students, of developing in you the power to guide the boys and girls of our country is ended. The task confronts you of demonstrating in actual practice that this effort has not been fruitless. Our fondest wish is that you may respond to the challenge of youth with a courage, a sympathy, and a love that will gladden all hearts.

Sincerely,
JEROME J. SAVITZ.

Last September a certain group of girls found, upon entering the Normal School, that they had acquired the section name of Junior B 1 and a capable faculty advisor in Miss Emory.

The Junior A I's, in co-operation with their big sister class, the Senior A I's, had the honor of being the first section to go over the top in raising their quota of $250 for the Camp-Yearbook Fund. Now they have more than topped their quota by reaching the $300 mark through the girls' later efforts in giving a movie benefit.

The girls have made a hobby of erecting table projects. They have constructed two large representations, one a miniature farm, and the other a model community. These were done in connection with their studies.

However, "all work and no play" is not the motto of the Junior I's, by any means. They know how to play also. There have been many jolly outings at "doggie roasts" on the campus, at Silver Lake, and at Camp Savitz. They have already spent one week-end at the camp.

Although the time is rapidly approaching when the Junior 1 girls will be separated for the summer vacation, they are consoled in the thought that next year they will all be together again.

When as one of the many Junior sections we arrived, we were much cheered at the thought of having our Big Sisters, the Senior 2's, introduce us to the school customs. They gave us a party in order to exemplify their friendly feeling toward us, and that we might become better acquainted.

We were second only to the Junior 1's in raising our money for the Yearbook-Camp Fund. One of our best contributions to the school as a part of our drive, inspired by Miss Dare, was the presentation of the Celeste Trio at an afternoon musicale and tea.

Much talent may be found in our own class. We were represented on the hockey team by Dorothy Davenport, on the Junior Yearbook art staff by Angelina Capizola, and many people have enjoyed the readings given by Helen Ship and Millicent Taylor, to say nothing of the pleasure we've gotten from the poetry of Frances Earle.

During the inter-class games we endeavored to show our "pep." In basketball we started out with a fair chance of winning the championship, but alas for our fond hopes! In this, however, as in the case of the inter-class games, we advanced to the semi-finals before we were eliminated.

The class has progressed steadily through its first year and has developed an attitude of loyalty that promises service and co-operation in the future.

Here's to the jolly Junior 3's who daily congregate in Room 108!

In athletic ability our class is represented by "Ted" Daniels, who starred on both the Hockey and Basketball Varsities.

There are few who are unfamiliar with "Lill" Rogers, who is assistant cheer leader, and joke editor of the Yearbook staff for next year.

Previous to our campaign for the Yearbook-Camp Fund last fall, the Senior 3's and Junior 3's held a luncheon in the dormitory dining room to become acquainted, and to offer suggestions for raising money.

During our campaign we combined forces with our sister class and gave a unique Sport Dance. The Song and Yell Books which we compiled and published proved an additional source of income. A cake sale held in Bridgeton was another drive. At present we are undertaking a Larkin order which we think will carry us over the top.

We are planning to spend the week-end of May 14th at Camp Savitz. Many members of the Junior 3's are active workers on the various Junior Prom Committees. Our comradeship and co-operation are evident not only in outside activities but in our daily associations with our classmates. If determination has anything to do with success, the Junior 3's will prove their real ability.

Seven months ago we first came together, twenty-six of us, a heterogeneous conglomeration of Juniors from South Jersey.

Our first social event was the jolly welcome party that our "Big Sister" class gave us. Next came the Junior-Senior tea when our Senior class showed us what a real get-to-know-each-other tea was like. When Myrtle Kessler and Margaret Brown entertained the rest of us with a surprise party in the auditorium, proof arrived that we had talent for singing, speaking, dancing, and the playing of musical instruments.

Mid-year elections next took place.

Then by earning our money for the Yearbook-Camp Fund individually, we reached our entire quota within our allotted two weeks.

Were we represented in sports? Arianna Claypool and Margaret Brown were members of the hockey team, and Arianna of the basketball team.

Do we have any outstanding pupils of the school in our class? Oleta Fagen was chosen as winner in the posture contest in which every class was represented, and Arianna Claypool is the president of the entire Junior Class.

One of our big traits is modesty, as may be judged from this manuscript. If you want to know more about us, our virtues, and our talents, just watch our progress.

Do you know the Junior 5's? You'll find them in Room 212. They have tried to do their part in contributing to the life of the school by entering into athletics, by giving short sketches in assembly, and by refilling the dish pan for the Camp Fund. Do you remember the play, "How the First Letter Was Written?" This was adapted to verse by one of their number. The spirit of the class is expressed in the following lines by the class poet, Kathleen McConnell:

*In sports, in plays, in lessons, too,
You'll find them alert and alive,
No task is so hard, no goal is so high,
As to vanquish a Junior A 5.*

We all met on that memorable day, September 8, 1926, in our home room, Number 222, to discover that we were more fortunate than other sections in having two faculty advisors, Miss Baker and Miss Carney. When we had problems to solve that were beyond us, we were sure of help.

The year passed swiftly, the outstanding event of which was our drive of two weeks for the Yearbook-Camp Fund. We worked with the Senior D's, who are our "big sisters," and at the end of our two weeks discovered that our goal had been successfully reached.

There have been, too, the usual comic classroom happenings. Shall we ever forget that time in psychology class when Miss Nielsen asked if anyone were absent, and Dot Johnson walked to the front of the room?

Remember this event:

Mr. Sangree—"Is that right, Miss Inna—Iner-er-ah—"

Minnie Iannarelli—"Yes."

Mr. Sangree—"I wish you would change your name!"

Incidents such as these have brought us together day by day, until now we are like one family. We share alike the trials, the work, and the pleasures that the Glassboro State Normal School offers.

On February 1, 1927, thirty-four students comprising the Junior B Class were taken into the fold of the Glassboro State Normal School by Dr. Savitz.

The Senior B's, our "big sisters," followed the lead of Dr. Savitz by acting as hostesses at a party given to us in our home room. Its keynote was Participation of Everyone.

Before long the Junior 1's, through a supper given to us on the camp grounds, introduced us to Camp Savitz, for which we have been working ever since.

Through the efforts of Miss Dare, our home room teacher, we were soon able to organize our class. As our faculty advisor we chose Mrs. Sangree, who has helped generously to put across anything we have attempted to do.

Probably no other class has used a greater variety of ways to make its money for the "Camp Yearbook Fund."

Easter eggs, can openers, steel brushes, table napkins, boutonnieres, flowers (cut or potted), home-made fudge, for sale, go with the Junior B's about the school.

Through participation and co-operation we hope to help maintain the standards and ideals of the Glassboro State Normal School.

The membership of the Glee Club this year has surpassed that of any previous year. We started in October with our Wednesday afternoon meetings and how we worked at those rehearsals!

The result of our intensive efforts was a great satisfaction to us all. On March 4, 1927, we gave our Third Annual Spring Concert. One hundred and fifty active members participated. The soloists, Alumni members of the Glee Club, were Miss Carrie Compton, trumpeter, and Miss Julia Hughes, soprano. From the proceeds we realized $300 for the Camp Yearbook Fund.

Saturday afternoon before Easter, several of our girls visited the Home for Crippled Children, in Philadelphia. This was our third Easter visit. The program consisted of stories and songs of the spring flowers and at its end, the children, who had been given early blossoms, resembled a veritable flower garden of arbutus, violets, daffodils, Easter lilies, tulips and roses.

On Arbor Day, our President, Marie Gosling, dedicated a red cedar tree to the memory of Edward MacDowell, an outstanding American composer.

Here's to the G. S. N. S. Glee Club of 1926-27!

The Orchestra

The Glassboro State Normal School Orchestra has completed another successful year.

It plays regularly for Chapel three times each week. Stirring processions and marches help to make these events inspiring.

Music for the annual Field Day, sponsored by the Physical Education Department, will again be furnished by the Orchestra, augmented by Alumni members.

The Achievement Club was organized in order to stimulate the students to do worth-while things, to develop in them leadership and the ability to co-operate with one another, to promote their physical well-being, and to arouse an interest in the various activities of the school and the home communities of the students. Every student may be an active member of the Achievement Club according to her ability or desire.

A certain number of credits is given any student who accomplishes specific things. In order to arouse greater interest, competition between the literary societies is carried on each quarter. To the society having the highest average number of credits per student the Achievement Club banner is awarded for the succeeding quarter. So far the Senior Forum has led. The student in each society having the highest number of credits is considered an honor student for that quarter. These honor students were given a luncheon at the end of the third quarter.

To the Achievement Board, made up of three team leaders from each literary society, has fallen the tremendous task of keeping the records of the credits won. This year the Board has endeavored to work out some definite regulations regarding its own organization and an interpretation of the achievements for which credit may be given. Copies of these regulations have been furnished each literary society. As a result of the experiments of the present year, the Board hopes to revise and put in more permanent form these regulations before the end of the term.

Faculty Advisor	M. LOUISE FINNEY

Each section is represented by a member on the Executive Committee. Our aim is to apply psychology in every way to the study of child development. During lunch period we have charge of the children of the demonstration school, observing them individually and in groups, guiding them in correct table etiquette, and helping them to choose the right kinds of food to build strong and healthy bodies. Here is our opportunity to train habit building.

Much of child nature, such as their games, interests, fair play and discipline is learned on the playground and indoors on rainy days.

Proof that children like parties and fun is not left out of our experience. The happy festival days of the year about which interest, tradition and sentiment hover, awakened memories of our childhood joys. Before we knew it we were children once more with our adopted brothers and sisters.

Friendship, confidence, real joys and sorrows of children, spell life in large letters.

Since psychology classes have ended, we still continue our work in grade groups under the guidance of Dr. Savitz, Miss Finney, Miss Nielsen, Miss Kintner, Miss Carlson and Miss Stauleup.

The Psychology Club has given us new and stimulating experiences. Our first fall meeting gave the keynote of search into psychology study through observation. A short play written by our members and directed by Miss Finney was used as a basis for an incidental memory test. We were amazed to discover how many things occurred before our very eyes unnoticed. This test was followed by one for memory span of digits, letters and words. It revealed to us our normal ability of memory spans.

Our most exciting program was given over to the detective use of association. Through it we discovered which of three girls had read a letter addressed to one of the instructors. Her response to a selected list of words trapped her.

As a contribution to the school, the club brought Dr. Johnstone, Director of the Training School in Vineland, and Dr. Doll, psychologist of the same institution, to address the student body. Dr. Johnstone pictured for us the home life of the school, and Dr. Doll gave an interesting illustrated talk on the various stages of feeble-mindedness. The club dedicated to our distinguished guests its Arbor Day tree, a symbol of life and growth.

Our year has been revealing and profitable, calling ever to us truly to discover ourselves.

The Art Club is an active organization whose purpose is to help beautify the school and its surroundings and to stimulate interest in art life of today.

In September we presented living pictures of some old favorites. Since then the club members have been busily making rag rugs, and planning window draperies for the camp.

Early in the season we gave a successful Barn Dance at which the gym was decorated to represent a barn, and the dancers as well as the orchestra members were dressed in country attire. The proceeds were donated to the Yearbook-Camp Fund.

In our meetings we receive many helpful suggestions in art problems, such as sketching in pencil and charcoal, and in gesso work. On one occasion we had for our model a girl in full Dutch costume.

We are kept in touch with the unusual things in the art world by various reports of exhibits visited and of art news of the day.

Our sculpture fund is growing. Some day the Art Club hopes to win renown by presenting to the school a worthwhile bit of sculpture.

As our season closes, we feel that with the effective help of our faculty advisor, Miss Baker, we are able to look back on a successful year.

Secretary	ARLINDUS COSSABOON
Treasurer	DOROTHY GARTON
Advisor	FLORENCE C. DARE

The fact that "Music hath charm" and tends to lure one on toward the worthwhile things has been proved by the various activities of the Music Club this year.

The members of this organization attended the "Messiah," given by the Philadelphia Choral Society, and the opera, "Lohengrin," presented by the San Carlo Opera Company.

The lives of Mendelssohn, Chopin, Schubert, and their contributions to music were studied.

In March the members were fortunate in having Mrs. Alexander Denweed, of Pitman, a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, talk to them on Conservatory Life.

St. Patrick's Day was celebrated by the presentation of an Irish program.

Miss Peters and her committee entertained the student body with a very interesting program.

The popular operas of the famous English composers, Gilbert and Sullivan, were discussed and a rather extensive program was given on "The Mikado."

All those connected with this society have come to realize the value of its aims and the joy obtained in realizing them. If, as is said, activity leads to success, the music club has qualified through its work this year.

The members sincerely feel that their growth in musical knowledge and personal progress as individuals has been due to the untiring efforts of Miss Dare, their faculty advisor, and of its officers.

Outdoor Club

Secretary	CLARA FRIEDMAN
Faculty Advisors	MR. AND MRS. JOHN B. SANGREE

Loyalty, faith, good-fellowship, sportsmanship, and a vital interest in the welfare of the school—such is the spirit of the Outdoor Club.

Fair weather or foul, we have hiked and camped, and week-ended under the enthusiastic leadership of Mr. and Mrs. Sangree.

The first time this year we set forth in the direction of the Rancocas with bags, bundles, bathing suits, and effervescent holiday spirits, but the best trip was the Ocean City pilgrimage. Lidy's car!—as bulgy as a Christmas package with blankets and boxes full of cake! Didn't we even have to hold up our feet for fear of putting them down on a pie?

This spring, as usual, the club had charge of Arbor Day. Forty-five trees and shrubs were planted and dedicated.

And now the Camp! To whom can Camp Savitz mean more, than to the Outdoor Club? Our dream of the past four years is realized. We contributed all of our savings to its fund, and in order to enjoy it as fully as possible we have divided into a hiking group, a swimming group, an Indian group, and a camping group.

The Original Club boasted fifteen members. The Log now shows a list of two hundred fifty names.

At this rate we shall be able to move mountains, for if a few people can do a great many worthwhile things, a large number will be able to do a great many more.

We have high hopes for our future.

The Camera Club considers itself fortunate in having had as its president for the first half of the year Mr. William Krouse. Mr. Krouse had had practical experience in photography and at once completed arrangements for a dark room to give members of the club opportunity for observation of the development and enlargement of pictures. He was able to do the developing for the entire school, the proceeds going to the Yearbook-Camp Fund.

The club has been active during the year in the following ways: A visit was made to the Sesqui-Centennial where various exhibits were recorded; a camera for the use of any member of the Camera Club was purchased; a contribution to the social welfare of the school was made by having Mr. James Radcliff of Millville, give an illustrated address on Hawaii from pictures which he himself had made into slides; the tree for Arbor Day donated by the members was dedicated to "the spirit of beauty, present and future," on the campus.

It is to be hoped that by June all the suggestions which have been so carefully considered may have been successfully carried to a satisfactory conclusion. If so, the Camera Club will have donated to Camp Savitz some colored enlargements of campus views and have won honorable mention in the camera contest conducted by New York Times and Mid-Weekly Pictorial.

"Ho! Ho! What's this?"

"Station G. S. N. S. is on the air this evening. The History Club will present itself. One minute, please."

"Good! Maybe here's where we can find out what to do if we start a club of our own. Let's look and listen in while the president tells of the achievements of her club."

"Many trips are taken by the Glassboro History Club. Last fall, one was taken to Valley Forge, and another one to the Sesqui. We are now planning trips to the Indian mounds in various parts of South Jersey.

"Another of our plans is to bring speakers to the school. We have had several this year. Mr. Frank Stewart, President of the Gloucester County Historical Society, spoke to us on local history. Dr. Elson, the historian, spoke to us of the value of the League of Nations. In connection with this, the club's programs are either centered about local history or on important events of the day.

"We have luncheons at the school every Monday. On Miss Willard's birthday, we gave her a surprise luncheon.

"This concludes our program for today. Station G. S. N. S. signing off at 12.25, Eastern daylight time."

During the year 1926-1927 the Dramatic Club has continued to accomplish worthwhile things.

The entire school was made to feel the true significance of National Drama Week through special programs given each day, either by members of the organization or by outside talent. The outstanding event of the week was the entertainment presented by the Alumni Players, secured through the National School of Elocution and Oratory in Philadelphia, the pioneer school of expression in America.

The regular programs have been highly satisfactory. Special credit is given to the members for their contributions. All are agreed that our membership roll for this year stands for an unusual amount of talent, and talent embodied in people who are willing to exert themselves. Then, too, no organization could help growing under the guidance of Miss Turner, who so forcefully and happily directs our general procedure and special work. We feel, therefore, that the work of the Dramatic Club is being passed on in good condition to the membership for the coming year.

With the aid of our faculty advisor, Dr. Stroh, we have been able to carry out a plan for the study of the art, music, literature and education of different countries. For each meeting we choose a country for discussion. Wherever possible we employ costumes, give folk dances, and try to make the setting typical. For example, at our Chinese meeting we served tea. These programs have been so entertaining that we eagerly look forward to them.

Dormitories

The Whitney House

Life at the Whitney House has proved during this year to be quite contrary to the Junior's gloomy expectations. They had heard, and truly enough, that the lights went out at a certain time at night, that the hours between the closing of school and breakfast the next morning were spent under the rather carefully kept routine of a dormitory, that there was only an allotted time to play, and that that seemed very short. The Seniors were not worrying at all about this. They had already learned what a lot of fun and sport can be crammed into a little space of time, and proceeded to introduce them to the "White Lady." The cool fall evenings found them all gathered in front of the crackling fire, while the sounds of the piano playing and many voices singing, or the soft sweet strains of the violin served to cheer and comfort them in moments of homesickness or weariness.

Neath this ancient roof many is the lesson plan that has been squeezed from an almost worn out brain; hundreds are the projects that have been planned in the name of Education.

It has been a happy time, and with a good deal of regret and more pleasurable anticipation of meeting again these Seniors and Juniors will part, the Seniors to go out into the field with a better understanding of their sister workers, and the Juniors to go on with greater courage and a higher standard of fellowship and good will as a result of their contacts with one another.

Nelling House

President.....HENRIETTA ROE
Vice-President.....KATHERINE KUTZ
Secretary and Treasurer.....FRANCES SPARKS

It looks peaceful and ordinary enough, this Nelling House, with its many windows and tan shades topped by a green roof and set back in an oak grove that has proved attractive to a company of birds and squirrels.

The fact that it is one of the Normal "dorms" and inhabited by eighteen lively Juniors and their Dean, Miss Carlson, keeps it from knowing the monotony of a commonplace existence.

The house could whisper many a tale of evening "spreads," and of havoc wrought by certain individuals who do not believe in "all work and no play."

The lack of proximity to the dining hall is an unfortunate feature for those of us who cannot struggle out of bed before the second bell has rung. The daily marathons run as a consequence thereof give the passerby the impression that he is perchance witnessing young Nurmis in the making rather than budding "school marms."

The Delsea House

Nine plodding figures on a hot and dusty road, figures laden down with books and laundry bags, and figures on whose very backs were written an expression of desperate hope and despair. Late for breakfast and on the very first Monday morning! What a calamity! But nothing ever was a calamity to those people. Everything was a joke. An overabundance of field mice seeking to make their homes in the cellar of the house was a joke, and the house received the name of Mouse Tower.

The irrepressibles were all Senior D's, supposedly mature and solemn, weighed down by the gravity of the knowledge of their years (!!) of teaching, but a jolly crew were they, and there was nothing they could not do, from building bookcases out of packing boxes to conducting a little landscape gardening on their much neglected front lawn.

Many were the parties sandwiched in between arduous hours of work, a party to the rest of their classmates, a Christmas party, Sunday afternoon teas served in the attractive sitting room before the open fire. Many was the dollar that was earned for the Camp Fund by the curling and washing of hair, and the collecting of Rainy-Day Money.

With much regret this group will part, and in three years, on the Saturday before Christmas, they are to meet again at a given place to recount the adventures that the passing years have brought.

The Ackley House

A sudden blast from screeching whistles, mighty roars like thunder, piercing shrieks which die away and leave only the faint echo of life's busy hum; usually these sounds may be ascribed to the daily routine of railroad life, but occasionally they proceed from the Ackley House just across the way from the Pennsylvania station. The house is but a gray stucco building not unlike many another of its kind. Sixteen girls and an understanding Dean reside therein.

These noises may be caused by any of a number of things. In most cases they issue from Miss Emory's room, where several lively girls are having a merry time in honor of somebody's birthday. Games are played, usually that type which requires perfect concentration and the best trained minds. Refreshments invariably follow, the quantity depending upon the time the party takes place. After singing a few songs, accompanied by the soothing strains of guitars, the party breaks up until the advent of another birthday.

If the shriek you hear should mount in volume, piling echo upon echo, you can be sure that some ghost has walked, and unearthly form and face add horror to clutching hands.

After ten-fifteen the Pennsylvania Railroad must do its own shrieking and groaning, for weary heads and tired throats cannot go on forever.

The Dormitory Association

ANY MEETING

The hum of many voices raised in friendly chat, the clatter of tableware that accompanies the feeding of a large group of people, suddenly the tinkle of a knife knocking against the side of a glass to call for silence and a voice raised above the other sounds.

"The meeting will please come to order!" are the words that come from the lips of Alida Helwig, the president of the Dormitory Association.

The minutes of the past meeting are read by Irene Woolson, the secretary; old business, new business; business of paying rents for the various dormitories; of paying bills; all the business of the cafeteria, dining room and dormitories is brought to the attention of these alert young minds to be passed on and discussed.

Then the president is heard asking Dr. Savitz if he has anything to add, and as he rises slowly to his feet one can judge from the expression of his face whether this thing he is about to say be a reprimand, a commendation, or a special plea or suggestion for some good cause.

When Dr. Savitz has finished his remarks, the president again speaks, this time to ask for a motion for adjournment. In a moment chairs have been pushed back and the group is slowly dissolving, until nothing remains but the echo of a few last laughing voices.

The Camp Dedication

The Student Alumni Association of the Glassboro State Normal School on this, the twenty-third day of December, nineteen hundred twenty-six, do lovingly and joyously dedicate the Camp at Greenwood Lake to Dr. Jerohn J. Savitz, and out of the affection of their hearts in token of their gratitude to him for originating and executing its purchase, do bestow upon this site of land the name Camp Savitz.

Beginnings

Three years ago, when the Normal School was just beginning to assume its place in the catalog of educational institutions, Dr. Savitz and Mr. Sangree gathered together a group of girls who were devoted to the out-of-doors and organized the Out-door Club. This jolly group had not had many delightful trips before the idea of a camp became the predominant aim. Not a large camp—oh, no!—just a cozy, little barracks affair surrounded by vast patches of God's divine open spaces.

It is said that he who accomplishes the most is he who has a purpose. So it is not surprising that each year thereafter a cozy sum was smuggled away to keep company with the first ten dollars and to be on hand when opportunity offered a desired site. This nest egg had not had many birthdays before it was indeed needed.

Sincere enthusiasm cannot be confined to a limited circle. It must of necessity bubble over and seep into the thoughts of others. When Dr. Savitz began telling us about the camp established at Trenton Normal it took but a little while for the idea of an Outdoor Club camp to be supplanted by the broader conception, a Glassboro Normal School Camp.

The test of the depth of this enthusiasm came this fall when Dr. Savitz called the Senior Class together and asked us if we would be willing to sacrifice a luxurious Yearbook for a plainer one and devote our energy to the financing of a school camp. The decision for supporting the Seniors in every detail was as speedily manifested by the Junior Class and the Alumni.

In the meantime possible sites had been visited. The comments upon them and the purchase terms finally centered themselves upon the Greenwood property at Elmer. We all know that the outcome was the purchase of the Greenwood Lake Estate on November 2, 1926. We were greatly helped in this by Mr. William H. Wheatley, the father of one of the girls.

The first step had been taken. From that time on the corridors of our dear Alma Mater were destined to resound with the phrase, "For the Camp." A schedule was devised whereby a Junior and Senior group worked together for two weeks endeavoring at the end of that time to have accumulated a specified pile of coins, the dusty ones being just as acceptable as those retaining the shine.

Even though it meant the extraction of money, the enthusiasm of the movement carried it forward. Nevertheless knowing our common weakness, we called forth our ingenuity so that when our team had charge we could present such novel, delicious, tempting, delectable (you notice how the adjectives run naturally "to eats"), rare morsels that the other teams would unconsciously spend, oblivious to everything but the rare treat at hand.

The Oak

The Homestead

Surely doughnuts, hot dogs, fudge and lolly-pops had never before tasted quite like this! Have you ever had such good times as we experienced at our wee afternoon dances, music furnished by our own orchestra? Of course, your mother could never get along without the can-openers one team sold! What do you suppose the Faculty has done with all the things they have bought?

We have not mentioned the hard work, but why need we? Wasn't it worth all when we met the second camp payment on April 1, 1927?

Let us retrogress a few minutes to recall the meeting of the Student-Alumni Camping Association on December 17, 1926. The meeting was called to order, as usual, but followed by motions to dispense with regular business procedure. Then it became the honor of the president of the organization to dedicate the Greenwood property to Dr. Savitz, to be known thereafter as "Camp Savitz." The reason for the name needs no explanation to members of our family. To others may we say that we hope Camp Savitz will always be worthy of the name it bears.

What has happened at Camp Savitz? Numerous week-ends have been enjoyed by various parties, the first spent by the Senior A D's. They had such a splendid time that the camp has been occupied by week-end groups ever since. Several Alumni Days have been held there. It is continuously being visited by happy throngs for afternoon hikes, a row on the lake, canoeing, picnics, doggie roasts, fishing, and swimming.

Each day finds some new addition to the camp. A new roof has been placed upon the comfortable old house, the walls have been papered, the floors have been painted, rag rugs have been laid around the bedrooms. In fact, everything is being done to make the house an inviting and cozy retreat.

While we have been engrossed in our plans for the present and the future, we have not overlooked outside interest in our camp. We have saved this article and now reprint it since it was one of the first to be published by our neighbor, the Elmer "Times."

Nineteen Twenty-Seven

"The students and Alumni of the Glassboro State Normal School have purchased the Greenwood Lake property, located one mile south of Elmer, from Mrs. Tempa Greenwood, through William M. Wheatley, realtor, at Elmer.

The property consists of approximately sixty acres, including the large lake, an eight-room dwelling house, numerous outbuildings and a large spindle mill which, when converted into a camp, will accommodate one hundred students.

The Old Spindle Mill

The property will be used as a camp for the accommodation of Normal School students and Alumni over week-ends and during the summer vacation. The camp with its surroundings affords exceptional opportunity for nature study for the Outdoor Club of over one hundred members. The large lake provides a means for all forms of recreation, bathing, boating, skating, and fishing for all students.

Plans are under way for improving and beautifying the property to adapt it to the recreational needs of the students. When the work is fully completed it will be one of the finest camps in the State.

The money to pay for the property is provided by the students and Alumni who purchase shares at one dollar each which gives them perpetual right to enjoy the privileges of the camp.

Dr. J. J. Savitz, principal of the State Normal School at Glassboro, was formerly principal of the State Normal School at Trenton. While in Trenton, Dr. Savitz organized a camp for the girls of that school similar to the one under way at Greenwood Lake. Today it is one of the most beautiful spots in the State. The people of South Jersey assure Dr. Savitz that he will have their earnest co-operation in this project.

The Oak

The Greenwood Lake property, oftentimes referred to as the "Lower Mill," has played an important part in the history of this community. It was purchased in 1891 by the late Robert K. Greenwood. There he conducted a spindlemaking business for nearly forty years. The mill was rushed to capacity during the recent war and supplied many of the largest clothing manufacturers with the weaving spindles. Mr. Greenwood was one of the most expert spindlemakers in this country, having learned his trade in England before coming to this country to live. He passed away January 6, 1925.

The younger son, Robert, Jr., and his mother remained at the homestead until about two weeks ago, when they moved into their new bungalow on State Street, Elmer. Postmaster L. H. Greenwood, the eldest son, was connected with the spindle mill for many years.

Much of the spindlemaking equipment remains in the mill, though it has not been operated of late. This will be dismantled and sold. For many years water power was used in operating the mill, but a gasoline engine had been used in recent years."

“The Camp”

By MARIE HALEY

It is an old mansion mellowed with years, a home by virtue of the many generations of happy feet that have scampered through its corridors. Suddenly it is left vacant. It is dark, dreary and lonesome and just longing for someone to light its candles, thaw out its cramped and frozen limbs, kindle once more a fire on its cozy hearth.

Again it is suddenly transformed. Lights beam and beckon from every diamond-paned window. A melody of sound bursts forth from every door and window; a melody of voices of youth—happy in a gay week-end.

Then, the aroma of fresh baked ham, roasted 'taters, rich brown gravy, biscuits, pumpkin pie, nuts, cakes, everything just tempting your appetite.

After the meal, a fire sparkling and crackling on the hearth, chestnuts roasting, a violin, a piano, the strains of a waltz, someone dancing, someone singing; someone prodding the fire and the sparks twirling merrily up the chimney. All draw close while someone tells a ghost story or spins a weird yarn of the sea, or if you prefer the out-of-doors—

The moon, caressing the earth with her long golden tresses or dipping her delicate finger tips in the wandering mystical stream. A low-lying canoe drifting languidly along with just the occasional lazy dip of the paddle. Silence, except for the drip, drip, of the oozing springs, or the swish of the over-hanging bushes, as you pass beneath them. An occasional call of an owl, then—the strains of a guitar, a serenade.

The moon, the canoe, someone and you—just drifting along.

Place Your Record Book In Good Hands

Whether your record will measure up to your ideals,—or be a disappointment, will be determined in a great measure by the extent with which you can depend upon your printer for counsel, co-operation and support.

It is with pardonable pride we give below extracts from letters received, showing our interest and help is perhaps more intimate and personal than is the rule.

"In the name of the class, I wish to thank you for your co-operation with, and kindness to us in all matters pertaining to the book. The present graduating class is to be congratulated on having such an excellent House to prepare its Record."

"In behalf of the Class, I wish to express our appreciation and entire satisfaction with our Record, its quality and appearance. The service and co-operation you gave us is highly commendable."

"I wish to thank you for the Class and particularly for myself, for the assistance and advice you have given in getting out our book."

"I wish to express my appreciation of the excellent work done by Clark Printing House. I also wish to say that your help and advice have been invaluable."

"I have found the Clark Printing House stands for promptness, dependability, accuracy and service. These qualities make the putting out of a Record a pleasure."

"Books are going fine. Letters are pouring in from faculty, department heads and students congratulating us on the book. I want you to share in it, for to you the major success of this book was due."

We are interested in producing Records of the highest standard, books in which the School and ourselves can take pride.

To this end our entire organization is committed. You are assured of that helpful co-operation, care in handling, best workmanship and attention to small details that show in the finished work.

It will mean much to you to have your Record in competent hands.
